

RefWorks: Creating an account

Creating a RefWorks account is easy. First, go to the library's home page, and, under Quick Links, select RefWorks, which will take you to the UNB Libraries' Guide to RefWorks. You should bookmark this guide as your homepage for accessing the correct version of RefWorks—one that is licenced by UNB Libraries. If you try to create a RefWorks account from RefWorks.com, you will be asked to pay to subscribe to the product. To avoid this, always go the UNB Libraries' Guide to RefWorks in order to log in to RefWorks.

The guide is a great place to find useful information about different features of RefWorks and contact information for the UNB Libraries' RefWorks help team who are always happy to help you with any RefWorks questions.

In order to create an account or log in once you've created one, go to the upper-right corner and select the "Login to RefWorks" button. Then select "Sign up for a New Account." Fill in your UNB or STU e-mail address and create a login name and password. Remember to use your UNB or STU e-mail address instead of gmail or yahoo. As a product licenced by UNB Libraries, RefWorks needs a way to authenticate you. Your UNB or STU email is the only way RefWorks can recognize you as a licenced user.

The next step is filling in your user information including your name and area of study and select "Create Account."

For more RefWorks videos go to Video Quick Tips or the UNB Libraries' Guide to RefWorks from the library's home page.
